The family of four penguins glared away from the two generous keepers, waddled as they travelled. The keepers fed them with enthusiasm as they took photos. As soon as the bucket of fish had gone the penguins decided to fish themselves. So they plunged into the pond to catch some fish.

After they had eaten they waddled around making footprints in the snow: As for the first time the penguins fell on their front and moved along quickly. The keepers came out. The penguins knocked into them, the keepers taken by surprise dropped the bucket of fish and fell. The penguins found their way to the fish and swallowed them down. Then gasped for breath after that they waddled away. The keepers now furious chased after them...
They fell into the pond because it froze to ice.
